Pray, Sir Rob-in Red-breast, pray who gave you leave
Look, Sir Rob-in Red-breast, here I own the soil,
Well, Sir Rob-in Red-breast, what you say is true.

Robin

Cher-ries from my cher-ry tree thus to come and thief? Pray you, sir, how is it yours?
And this tree I've plant-ed here, tend-ed it with toil. I help keep it free from worms.
Eat your fill and nev-er think I be-grudge it you. Thank you ver-y kind-ly, sir!

Did you make the tree? Can you prove those cherries, sir, don't be-long to me?
I have la-bor'd too. So I think the fruit be-longs both to me and you.
Thanks to you I'll sing, And re-turn to vis-it you ear-ly ev-'ry spring.

Note: Let half the children be farmers and half Robin Redbreasts. Those playing Robin may mount chairs for trees. It may, of course, be done by two children instead of the whole group.
