Alexander the Great was the son of Bucephalus.

His mother told Alexander

a Macedonian general named Philip.

Alexander's teacher

if he could ride it.

When he was twelve years old

he was the son of a Greek god.

His father said he would give him the horse

when he was only thirty-three years old.

He faced the sun while on the horse

by building a bridge to it.

Alexander named his horse

he saw a horse he wanted.

The city named after his horse conquered the then-known world.

He set an example for his troops

was Bucephala.

He captured a city on an island

by living under the same conditions they endured.

During his lifetime Alexander was Aristotle.

Alexander died

because the animal was afraid of his shadow.
